Cretaceous Earth Dynamics and Climate in Asia

INVITATION & AIMS

We cordially invite you to participate in the 1st International Symposium of IGCP 679, which will be held during October 11–17, 2019 in Qingdao, China.

The Cretaceous was the most recent, warmest period in the Phanerozoic Era, and characterized by more elevated atmospheric $p\text{CO}_2$ levels and significantly higher global sea levels than today. The IGCP 679 project is aimed to explore the processes and mechanisms of the rapid change in climate and environment under greenhouse conditions during the Cretaceous, and the evolutionary responses of the biodiversity on land of the Asian continent and in the around oceans. The symposium scientific sessions will provide an opportunity for a close discussion of the latest research results on Asia-Pacific Cretaceous ecosystems and palaeoclimate.

A pre-symposium field excursion will be organized to visit the Cretaceous terrestrial strata in Shandong Province, which contain abundant mega- and micro-fossils. In a three-day pre-symposium field excursion, we will visit some important sites to learn the latest research progress on the non-marine Cretaceous stratigraphy, and the yielding abundant various biotas.

The organizing and scientific committees warmly welcome you in Qingdao, for the first IGCP 679 symposium, which is hosted by Nanjing Institute of Geology and Palaeontology, Chinese Academy of Sciences, and organized by Shandong Institute of Geological Survey together with School of Earth Science and Engineering, Shandong University of Science and Technology, and co-organized by Qingdao Geological Engineering Survey Institute.
